BBe6 in B2 unpins promoted self-pinned white mating pieces knight and queen. To enable promotions bQe3 in both solutions anticipatory unpins wPe7 and at the same time determine white's line of play. Thematic play with only three pieces wPe7, bQe3 and bBe6. Very complex content.

Theme: In a diagram position none white piece is pinned. In a solution all black moves are unpinning of white thematic pieces – direct or indirect (anticipatory).

How the three set mates, in which White gives his opponent a waiting move, can be realized in the solution, even though Black weakens the white position with his first move, this is impressively demonstrated with beautiful dual avoidances. A helpmate that made me enthusiastic from the beginning. There are two comparable examples, but with a completely different structure, which is why the originality of the A54 is secured.

Cross checks with self-pin of both black battery pieces that play on the same ideas. Umnov to f6. The problem has an abundant content.

Three elements of the theme are performed when wK and wB moves on the same squares – d6,d7

The nonthematic addition of the composition are model mates, the white bishop and king playing on the same squares d6 and e7 and the exchange of functions of the pawn f5 and bishop.

Chumakov theme (rss, 3)

Theme: In set play, two or three black officers (not pawns) are captured. The same officers are in the solution used to block the squares around the black king.

White-Black + Black-White form of the Klasinc theme:

A most original bivalves play .It may Look A Symmetrical but that is the beauty of it. In the first solution the black Bishop makes the switchback while in the second solution the white Rook does the same.
